

Top-performing managers are more likely to focus on skill development

In a recent study, we successfully isolated a key difference between top-performing and lower performing managers.

Our analysis of more than 300 coaching conversations found that top managers are 63% more likely to focus their coaching on skills and behaviors than their lower performing peers.

How would your people managers stack up?

63%

